Thank you for contacting BC Financial Services Authority (BCFSA). Your complaint is important to BCFSA as it might be the first indicator of a potential market conduct issue. We carefully consider each complaint and may take action if we identify a breach of the Credit Union Incorporation Act, Financial Institutions Act, or other legislation that BCFSA administers. BCFSA may also refer a complaint to other regulatory bodies when appropriate. BCFSA will make the assessment of whether a complaint is referred, investigated and result in any disciplinary action.

Even when BCFSA does not take action on your complaint, it may disclose your complaint and the information in it, including to the persons you name in your complaint. Important information about the authority for BCFSA to collect, use and disclose your information, including personal information, is included below.

BCFSA is the Crown Agency that regulates British Columbia's financial services sector. BCFSA administers the Acts included in the Financial Services Authority Act. For regulated financial institutions, BCFSA enforces requirements for business authorization, supervises compliance with legislation and BCFSA expectations, and may engage the sanctions powers stated in the Financial Institutions Act.

BCFSA does not provide legal advice for consumers. If you require legal advice, you should consult a lawyer/legal counsel. Time limits may apply.

BCFSA does not generally intervene in individual disputes, service quality issues, and/or business decisions made by credit unions or trust company/corporations. BCFSA may consider whether such complaints indicate a (potential) market conduct concern that warrants action.

BCFSA accepts complaints in any format, however, completing this form ensures adequate, initial information is provided for assessment of complaints.

Contact us at (604) 398-5029 or CUandTrusts@bcfsa.ca with any questions about making a complaint.
