

Disclosure of Representation to Lender

Before I help you buy, sell or exchange mortgages, I must give you this form to confirm that
I will represent you as a client.

DUTIES I OWE YOU AS A CLIENT

As your representative, I must:

- Act only in your best interests.
- Tell you everything I know that might affect your decisions (e.g., how much the mortgage brokerage gets paid and who pays it, and any conflicts of interest).
- Keep your personal information confidential, even after our relationship ends.

ACTING AS YOUR AGENT

Mortgage brokerages can operate under two models of agency: brokerage agency or designated agency. My brokerage operates under the following model of agency:

(select option)

- ☐ Brokerage agency – the mortgage brokerage represents you as a client, which means that the brokerage and I, as well as all mortgage brokers who work for it, owe you the same client duties listed above.
- ☐ Designated agency – the mortgage brokerage is designating me, and other members of my brokerage (if applicable), to be your agent. This means that I, and others (if applicable), owe you the duties listed above but other agents at the brokerage do not. This allows different brokers at this brokerage to represent different parties in the same deal without creating a conflict of interest. The brokerage has limited duties to you but must supervise all brokers.

FURTHER DISCLOSURE

When I provide you with mortgage options, I will also give you:

- Disclosure of suitability and material risks: this helps you decide if a mortgage option meets your needs and circumstances.
- Disclosure of interests: this shows you the potential interests I, or people connected to me, might have in your mortgage transaction.
- Disclosure of information statement to lender: this provides terms and conditions, general risks, and other important information about the mortgage option.
- Disclosure of remuneration: this tells you how much the brokerage gets paid, including from anyone other than you as our client (e.g., referrals).

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT AND SIGNATURES

This disclosure of representation and agency agreement is required under sections 40 and 68 of the Mortgage Services Rules. Signing this does not prevent you from obtaining the services of another mortgage broker or brokerage.
